Reflecting on teaching

- What went well in this lesson or course, and why?
- What challenges did I face, and how did I address them?
- What would I do differently next time to improve the learning experience?
- Which teaching methods or strategies were most effective? Why?
- Did I make the content accessible and relatable for all students?
- How did I balance between theoretical instruction and practical application?
- Was my pacing appropriate for the material and the student's needs
- How effective was the feedback I provided to students?
- How did I address misunderstandings or gaps in knowledge?
- What feedback have I received from students, and how have I used it to improve?
- Are there recurring themes in the feedback that indicate areas for improvement?
- How do I ensure that student feedback is an ongoing part of my teaching practice?
- How engaged were my students during the lesson?
- Did I effectively communicate the learning objectives to the students?
- Were the students able to demonstrate understanding of the material?
- How well did I cater to different learning styles and needs?
- Did I provide enough opportunities for active learning and participation?
- What will you do differently next time
- What are you taking away from this session
